

Art Romandy

First Vice President

Art joined Daum Commercial Real Estate Services in 1985 and quickly became a land expert primarily within the San Bernardino Valley area from the LA County line east to the City of San Bernardino; although his marketing activities have also extended from time to time to Riverside County as well as into the high desert communities. He has also marketed industrial buildings, both leases and sales, within the same geographical area.

Previously, he was the Industrial Development Coordinator in the San Bernardino County Economic Development Department where his responsibilities lay primarily in assisting industrial developers, industrial companies, and real estate brokers to find suitable land for development as well as assisting them to expedite their projects through the governmental approval process.

During his tenure with the County of San Bernardino, Art was instrumental in assisting several cities in establishing industrial redevelopment project areas, such as the Southeast Industrial Park in San Bernardino, and the Southwest Industrial Park in Fontana as well as bringing industries into the County.

In earlier years, Art was the Development Director for the Orange County Chamber of Commerce. Prior to that he worked in consumer products sales marketing with the General Foods Corporation, and helped to establish a recreational vehicle manufacturing company.

A veteran of World War II, Art continued a weekend career in the US Army Reserve and retired as a Lt Colonel.

The Romandy's reside in Orange, California, have been married since 1951, and have four children, nine grandchildren, and two great grandchildren.
